

Public Interest Disclosure Policy

Statement of commitment

The reporting of suspected misconduct within the Queensland public sector is fundamental to its ongoing integrity and health. (Brown et al. 2004)

The most effective protection for a person making a public interest disclosure is the right organisational culture. The department, in line with its values, is committed to creating and sustaining a positive ethical climate with accountable behaviour. This comes from leadership that openly recognises the significant contribution staff make to our success and strongly encourages disclosure of unethical and fraudulent behaviour.

The department aims to provide clear guidance to staff on how to handle and deal with the complex issues associated with an ethical dilemma and when faced with potential wrongdoing.

Principles

- Every employee of the Queensland public service has an ethical responsibility to report suspected corrupt conduct, maladministration, wasting of public funds, substantial and specific danger to public health and safety, the environment or a person with a disability, and reprisal action.
- The principles of natural justice (procedural fairness) will apply to all investigations of matters which are the subject of public interest disclosures (PIDs). The department is committed to treating PIDs appropriately and making the process fair for both the discloser and the person who is the subject of the disclosure.
- The rights of any person who is subject to, or is in some way associated with, a PID will be safeguarded.
- Managers and supervisors are to ensure employees are aware of their responsibilities in making a PID and are able to advise other persons of the appropriate reporting process.

Legislation

- Public Interest Disclosure Act 2010
- Public Sector Ethics Act 1994
- Crime and Corruption Act 2001
- Disability Services Act 2006
- Ombudsman Act 2001
- Public Records Act 2002

The Public Sector Ethics Act 1994 and the Public Interest Disclosure Act 2010 provide the ethical framework and spell out the protection principles. The Crime and Corruption Act 2001 provides an external reporting mechanism and an independent investigative and enforcement body.

What is a Public Interest Disclosure?

A PID can relate to:

By public officers:

- Corrupt conduct, including fraud and corruption.
- Maladministration that adversely affects anybody's interests in a substantial and specific way.
- A substantial misuse of public resources (including funds, but not based on a mere disagreement over policy that may properly be adopted about amounts, purposes and priorities of expenditure).
- A substantial and specific danger to public health or safety or the environment.

By any person:

- Reprisal as a result of a PID.
- Specific offences or contraventions presenting a substantial and specific danger to the environment.
- A substantial and specific danger to the health or safety of a person with a disability.

All DJAG staff are 'public sector officers'. To be a PID, the discloser must have a 'reasonable belief' that the wrongdoing has occurred or provide evidence which objectively tends to show the wrongdoing has occurred.

A disclosure amounts to a PID and is covered by the PID Act even if the:

- discloser reports the information as part of their duties – such as an auditor reporting a fraud or an occupational health and safety officer reporting a safety breach.
- disclosure is made anonymously – the discloser is not required to give their name or any identifying information.
- discloser has not identified the material as a PID – it is up to the Department of Justice and Attorney-General (DJAG) to assess information received and decide if it is a PID.
- disclosure is unsubstantiated following investigation – the discloser is protected when the information they provide is assessed as a PID, whether or not it is subsequently investigated or found to be substantiated.

Complaints concerning an expression of dissatisfaction about staff conduct, a service, procedure, practice or departmental policy that are not resolved at the point of service, should be pursued by following either the Employee Complaints Policy and Procedure or the Client Complaint Management Policy.

PID Management Program

The Director-General has overall responsibility for ensuring that DJAG develops, implements and maintains a PID management program. The DJAG PID management program encompasses:

- commitment to encouraging the internal reporting of wrongdoing.
- senior management endorsement of the value to DJAG of PIDs and the proper management of PIDs.
- a communication strategy to raise awareness among employees about PIDs and DJAG's PID procedure.
- a training strategy to give employees access to training about how to make a PID, information on the support available to a discloser, and advice on how PIDs will be managed.
- specialist training and awareness about PIDs for senior management and other staff who may receive or manage PIDs, disclosers or workplace issues relating to PIDs.
- the appointment of a specialist officer/unit to be responsible for issues related to the management of PIDs.
- ensuring effective systems and procedures are in place so that issues and outcomes from PIDs inform improvements to service delivery, business processes and internal controls.
- regular review of the Public Interest Disclosure Procedure and evaluation of the effectiveness of the PID management program.

The Director-General has designated the following roles and responsibilities for managing PIDs within DJAG:

Role:	Responsibilities:	Officer:

Delegated decision-maker	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> review investigation report and determine outcome of the matter 	An appropriate decision-maker will be appointed for each PID investigated.

Why make a PID?

Employees who speak up about these matters can be the most important sources of information to identify and address problems in public sector administration. DJAG supports the disclosure of information about wrongdoing because:

- implementing systems for reporting and dealing with wrongdoing contributes to the integrity of DJAG.
- the outcomes of PIDs can include improvements to systems that prevent fraud and other economic loss to DJAG.
- the community's trust in public administration is strengthened by having strong processes in place for reporting wrongdoing.

When making a PID the discloser receives the protections provided under the PID Act, including:

- confidentiality – the discloser's name and other identifying information will be protected to the extent possible.
- protection against reprisal – the discloser is protected from unfair treatment by DJAG and employees of DJAG as a result of making the PID.

- immunity from liability – the discloser cannot be prosecuted for disclosing the information but is not exempt from action if they have engaged in wrongdoing.
- protection from defamation – the discloser has a defence against an accusation of defamation by any subject officer.

Who can a PID be disclosed to?

A PID must be made to the ‘proper authority’ to receive disclosures of the type being made.

Disclosers are encouraged to make a disclosure to an appropriate officer of DJAG first. If the matter is not resolved, or the discloser is concerned about confidentiality, the disclosure may be made to another appropriate agency.

Who to contact within DJAG:	Other agencies that can receive PIDs:
Any person (including employees) can make a disclosure to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the relevant supervisor or manager. • the human resources unit • the Director-General or the senior leader of the relevant division • the Ethical Standards Unit. DJAG’s preferred approach is to make a disclosure to the Executive Director, Ethical Standards Unit. If you are a member of the public (not DJAG employee) you may use the Client Complaints Policy.	Disclosures can be made to an agency that has a responsibility for investigating the information disclosed: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Crime and Corruption Commission (CCC) for disclosures about corrupt conduct including reprisal • Queensland Ombudsman for disclosures about maladministration • Queensland Audit Office for disclosures about a substantial misuse of resources • Department of Youth Justice and/or Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women for disclosures about danger to the health and safety of a child or young person with a disability • Department of Communities, Disability Services and Seniors for disclosures about danger to the health and safety of a person with a disability • Office of the Public Guardian for disclosures about danger to the health and safety of a person with a disability • Department of Environment and Science disclosures about danger to the environment • A Member of the Legislative Assembly (MP) for any wrongdoing or danger • The Chief Judicial Officer of a court or tribunal in relation to a disclosure about wrongdoing by a judicial officer.

Any DJAG employee who receives a disclosure that may be a PID must advise the PID Co-ordinator for assessment and reporting.

A disclosure can only be made to a journalist if the following conditions have been met:

- a valid PID was initially made to a proper authority, and
- the proper authority:
 - decided not to investigate or deal with the disclosure, or
 - investigated the disclosure but did not recommend taking any action, or
 - failed to notify the discloser within six months of making the disclosure whether or not the disclosure was to be investigated or otherwise dealt with.

A journalist can be publishing in either print or electronic news media.

A person who makes a disclosure to a journalist in these circumstances is protected under the PID Act. However, disclosers should be aware that journalists are not bound under the confidentiality provisions of section 65 of the PID Act.

If these conditions are not met, DJAG staff disclosing information to a journalist or otherwise sharing information externally (for example on social media) is likely to breach confidentiality and be considered as a disciplinary matter.

How to make a PID

A discloser can make a PID in any way, including anonymously, either verbally or in writing. To assist in the assessment, and any subsequent investigation of a PID, disclosers are requested to:

- provide contact details. This could be an anonymous email address that is created for the purpose of making the disclosure (subject to restrictions on the handling of public records) or a telephone number. If you use an anonymous email account, you should monitor it for any response from the department.
- provide as much information as possible about the suspected wrongdoing, including:
 - who was involved
 - what happened
 - when it happened
 - where it happened
 - whether there were any witnesses, and if so who they are
 - any evidence that supports the PID, and where the evidence is located
 - any further information that could help investigate the PID
- provide this information in writing.

Deciding whether a matter is a PID

If there is any doubt as to whether a matter is a PID, further information may be obtained by the Ethical Standards Unit to inform the decision. If doubt still remains, the matter will be considered and managed as a PID.

It is an offence under the PID Act to intentionally give false or misleading information intending it be acted on as a PID. Employees may be subject to disciplinary action for intentionally giving false or misleading information in a PID, or during an investigation into a PID.

Where a discloser states they are making a PID, but it is assessed that the matter is not a PID DJAG will advise the discloser:

- that their information has been received but was not assessed as a PID.
- the reasons for the decision.
- the review rights available if the discloser is dissatisfied with the decision and how to request review.
- any action DJAG proposes to take in relation to the matter.
- any other options the discloser has in relation to the matter.

Assessing a PID

The disclosure will be assessed in accordance with the PID Act, the PID standards, DJAG's Public Interest Disclosure Policy and any other relevant procedure(s).

Once the matter has been assessed as a PID, DJAG will provide reasonable information to the discloser in writing including:

- that their information has been received and assessed as a PID.
- the action to be taken by DJAG in relation to the disclosure, which could include referring the matter to an external agency, or investigating.
- the likely timeframe involved.
- the name and contact details of the DJAG PID support officer and arrangements that DJAG has put in place to support the discloser.
- the discloser's obligations regarding confidentiality.
- the protections the discloser has under the PID Act.
- the commitment of DJAG to keep appropriate records and maintain confidentiality, except where permitted under the PID Act.
- how updates regarding intended actions and outcomes will be provided to the discloser.
- contact details for DJAG's Employee Assistance Program, for DJAG staff.

If the PID has been made anonymously and the discloser has not provided any contact details, DJAG will not be able to acknowledge the PID or provide any updates.

Referring a PID

If DJAG decides there is another proper authority that is better able to deal with the PID, the PID may be referred to that agency. This may be because:

- the PID concerns wrongdoing by that agency or an employee of that agency.
- that agency has the power to investigate or remedy the matter.

Before referring the PID to another agency, DJAG will conduct a risk assessment, and will not proceed with the referral if there is an unacceptable risk of reprisal.

It may also be necessary to refer the PID to another agency because of a legislative obligation, for example, refer a matter to the Crime and Corruption Commission where there is a reasonable suspicion that the matter involves or may involve corrupt conduct (as required by section 38 of the Crime and Corruption Act 2001).

The confidentiality obligations of the PID Act permit appropriate officers of DJAG to communicate with another agency about the referral of a PID. Officers will exercise discretion in their contacts with any other agency under the Ethical Standards Unit's instruction and guidance.

The discloser will be advised of the action taken by DJAG.

Risk assessment and protection from reprisal

Upon receiving a PID, DJAG will conduct a risk assessment to assess the likelihood of the discloser (or witnesses or affected third parties, where appropriate) suffering reprisal action as a result of having made the disclosure. This assessment will take into account the actual and reasonably perceived risk of the discloser (or witnesses or affected third parties, where appropriate) suffering detriment, the Ethical Standards Unit will consult with the discloser to the extent practicable.

A risk assessment will be undertaken if the discloser is anonymous on the basis of information available in the PID. The risk assessment will also take into account the risk to persons who may be suspected of making the PID.

Consistent with the assessed level of risk, DJAG will develop and implement a risk management plan and arrange any reasonably necessary support or protection for the discloser (or witnesses or affected third parties, where appropriate).

DJAG will regularly reassess the risk of reprisal while the PID is being managed, in consultation with the discloser, and review the risk management plan if required.

In the event of reprisal action being alleged or suspected, DJAG will:

- attend to the safety of the discloser (or witnesses or affected third parties, where appropriate) as a matter of priority.
- review its risk assessment, risk management plan and any protective measures needed to mitigate any further risk of reprisal.
- manage any allegation of a reprisal as a PID in its own right, where it meets the definition criteria.

Reprisal

If a person making a PID has concerns about reprisal being taken against them or them suffering a detriment because of the disclosure, they should advise the Ethical Standards Unit, which will consider appropriate protections per the PID Act.

Section 40 of the PID Act makes it an offence for an employee to take a reprisal because of a belief that another person has made, or intends to make a PID.

During an investigation or other action to deal with a PID, all DJAG staff must continue to behave in accordance with the expectations described in the department's Workplace Policy.

Declining to take action on a PID

Under the PID Act, the DJAG may decide not to investigate or deal with a PID in various circumstances, including:

- the information disclosed has already been investigated or dealt with by another process.
- the information disclosed should be dealt with by another process.
- the age of the information makes it impractical to investigate.

- the information disclosed is too trivial and dealing with it would substantially and unreasonably divert DJAG from the performance of its functions.
- another agency with jurisdiction to investigate the information has informed DJAG that an investigation is not warranted.

If a decision is made not to investigate or deal with a PID DJAG will give the discloser written reasons for that decision.

If the discloser is dissatisfied with the decision they can request a review by writing to the Director-General of DJAG within 28 days of receiving the written reasons for decision.

Confidentiality

Section 65 of the PID Act makes it an offence for a person to make a record of, or intentionally or recklessly, disclose confidential information received in the administration of the PID Act to anyone, except where authorised to do so by the PID Act.

While DJAG will make every attempt to protect confidentiality, a discloser's identity may need to be disclosed:

- for full investigation of the PID;
- under a legal requirement (e.g. during criminal prosecution processes);
- to provide safety or welfare;
- for natural justice / procedural fairness (after considering the risk of reprisal);
- under right to information/information privacy legislation.

DJAG will ensure that communication with all parties involved will be arranged discreetly to avoid identifying the discloser wherever possible.

Disclosers should be aware that while DJAG will make every attempt to keep their details confidential, it cannot guarantee that others will not try to deduce their identity.

If you make a disclosure, you are reminded that the matters surrounding the investigation will be confidential and DJAG staff are directed to maintain the integrity of the process by not discussing it with your work colleagues or other unauthorised persons. All statements and correspondence in regard to the matter are strictly confidential. Please note that the confidentiality provision will not preclude you from sharing this information with your union representative/approved support person/legal representative.

DJAG takes confidentiality seriously and breaches of confidentiality may attract disciplinary action. The Ethical Standards Unit will consider the potential impact of either a lawful discloser of a discloser's identity (in accordance with the circumstances listed above) or reported breaches and appropriate management strategies will be adopted, if required.

Support for disclosers

DJAG recognises that providing appropriate support to a discloser is an important feature of effective PID management.

DJAG will treat all PIDs appropriately. The Executive Director, Ethical Standards Unit, will take your concerns seriously and ensure your privacy and confidentiality (as far as possible) throughout the appropriate process. You can also be confident of a commitment to protection against reprisal and bullying.

DJAG staff and their immediate family members (including partner, child, and other family member residing with the employee) are able to access professional counselling and well-being support through the Employee Assistance Program. The service provider's telephone number is 1300 360 364.

In some cases the discloser may not be a DJAG employee, however this policy covers both DJAG employees and members of the public who make a PID. The level of support and support services offered will alter for disclosers who are members of the public, however this will be assessed on a case by case basis in the PID assessment form.

The Queensland Ombudsman can also provide information and advice for people who are considering making or have made a PID.

The Crime and Corruption Commission is involved in the PID process, however its role is as an integrity agency to which PIDs are made.

If an employee suffers an injury (such as a psychological condition, for example), arising out of or in the course of their employment, the employee has a right to lodge a claim for workers' compensation under the Workers' Compensation and Rehabilitation Act 2003. Employees should contact WorkCover for further information.

For those making a PID, section 36 of the PID Act states that a person is not liable civilly, criminally or under an administrative process for making a PID. Under section 73(2)(f) of the Industrial Relations Act 2016, it constitutes an unfair dismissal if an employee is dismissed on the basis of making a PID or because of a belief that an employee has made or may make a PID in accordance with the Public Interest Disclosure Act 2010.

Where required, interpreters or other accessibility assistance will be provided to employees or other persons wanting to make a PID.

For more information on how to make a PID read Thinking about blowing the whistle: a guide for individuals working in the public sector. This is available on the website of the Crime and Corruption Commission, www.ccc.qld.gov.au.

Making a PID does not prevent reasonable management action. If the discloser is a DJAG staff member, the discloser will continue to be managed in accordance with normal, fair and reasonable management practices during and after the handling of the PID.

Investigating a PID

If a decision is made to investigate a PID, this will be done with consideration for the:

- principles of natural justice;
- obligation under the PID Act to protect confidential information;
- obligation under the PID Act to protect officers from reprisal;
- interests of subject officers.

If as a result of investigation, the information about wrongdoing provided in the PID is substantiated, appropriate action will be taken.

Where the investigation does not substantiate wrongdoing, DJAG will consider a review of systems, policies and procedures to identify whether there are improvements that can be made and consider if staff training is required, where necessary.

Rights of subject officers

DJAG acknowledges that for officers who are the subject of a PID the experience may be stressful. DJAG will protect their rights by:

- assuring them that the PID will be dealt with impartially, fairly and reasonably in accordance with the principles of natural justice
- confirming that the PID is an allegation only and a determination will be made on investigation
- providing them with information about their rights and the progress and outcome of any investigation
- referring them to the Employee Assistance Program for support.

Staff and management responsibilities

All DJAG staff, especially managers and supervisors should make themselves familiar with this policy and their obligations under the Code of Conduct for the Queensland Public Service. They must provide clear guidance to staff on how to handle complex issues and how to deal with an ethical dilemma when faced with potential wrongdoing. Advice is available from the Ethical Standards Unit.

Managers must ensure staff are provided with information about making a disclosure and are familiar with the process of making a public interest disclosure. All staff should also be able to identify potential situations where behaviour may be unethical or fraudulent and know how to report it. Managers and supervisors have obligations in this regard under section 26 of the Public Service Act 2008 and the DJAG Workplace Policy.

Right to Review

There are several circumstances in which the department may decide to not deal with or investigate a PID. Upon being advised of the reasons for such a decision you may within 28 days request a review.

If you are not happy with the outcome of the department's dealing with the PID you can request further information from the department or contact the Queensland Ombudsman to request a review of the matter.

You may also wish to seek independent legal advice or you can apply to the Supreme Court for a review of the decision under the Judicial Review Act 1991.

Record-keeping

In accordance with its obligations under the PID Act and the Public Records Act 2002, DJAG will ensure that:

- accurate data is collected about the receipt and management of PIDs.
- anonymised data is reported to the Office of the Queensland Ombudsman in their role as the oversight agency, through the PID reporting database.

Records about disclosures, investigations, and related decisions will be kept secure and accessible only to appropriately authorised people involved in the management of the PID.

Information Privacy

Personal information collected during a PID assessment or investigation process will be used as necessary to appropriately deal with the matter subject of the PID. It may be disclosed to relevant parties and/or agencies subject to statutory protections and will be managed in accordance with the Information Privacy Act 2009, the PID Act and the Public Records Act 2002. The personal information will not be otherwise disclosed unless with the individual's consent or as required by a law.

Responsibilities for this policy

The Executive Director, Ethical Standards Unit, is responsible for the preparation, review and maintenance of the policy.

This policy will be reviewed 5 years from date of approval.
