Mock trial

One of the most popular activities during Law Week are the mock trials.

A mock trial is a pretend court hearing which is acted out by people playing a variety of court room roles.

Mock trials are often used by lawyers to test and examine theories prior to going to court. While high school and university law students use mock trials as a practical element throughout their studies.

Why not hold your own mock trial at home or school and have your class or family participate?

Visit www.lawweek.qld.gov.au or your local courthouse to find out how to set-up and run your own mock trial!
