The Queensland Government responds to recommendations directed to government agencies at inquests by informing the community if a recommendation will be implemented or the reason why a recommendation is not supported.

The departments named in this response will provide implementation updates until the recommendation is delivered. Further information relating the implementation of recommendations can be obtained from the responsible minister named in the response.

Recommendation 1
The Queensland Police Service and the Department of Education consider implementing a memorandum of understanding or some other protocol regarding the sharing of information that may be relevant to each of their separate investigatory responsibilities for incidents that arise within a child care environment.

Response and action: implementation of the recommendation is in progress.

Responsible agency: Queensland Police Service (lead), supported by the Department of Education.

On 2 October 2019 the Minister for Police and Minister for Corrective Services, and the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

The Department of Education met with the Queensland Police Service to discuss current policies and legislation regarding the sharing of information between the two agencies.

The Department of Education and the Queensland Police Service will develop a process for the sharing of information and will liaise quarterly to review this process.

Further consultation with key Queensland Police Service stakeholders, including the Police Communications Centre, Operational Improvement Unit and Legal Division, is required.

Recommendation 2
The Ministerial Council and the Australian Children’s Education Quality Authority consider changes to the national law and the national regulations to require all family day care educators to hold a Certificate III in Children’s Services before they commence caring for children.

Response and action: implementation of the recommendation is in progress.

Responsible agency: Department of Education.

On 2 October 2019 the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

Education Council (a ministerial council on school education, early childhood and higher education) is undertaking a review of the national law and regulations governing early childhood education and care services. The review will consider whether to mandate family day care educators to hold a Certificate III in Children’s Services before they begin caring for children in a family day care service.
As part of the review, Education Council will release a consultation regulatory impact statement. Subject to Education Council approval, the statement will outline options regarding increasing the qualification requirements for family day care educators and seek views on their impact on the early childhood education and care sector. Education Council will consider the feedback from the sector, families and communities and determine whether to implement regulatory or legislative changes.

On 31 March 2020 the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

Education Council is undertaking a review of the national quality framework governing early childhood education and care services, including family day care services. The review will consider whether to mandate family day care educators and other early childhood services operating with a single educator to hold a Certificate III in Children’s Services before they begin caring for children as part of an approved education and care service.

The review is currently in the consultation regulation impact statement stage, with a number of options proposed on this issue such as removing the ‘actively working towards’ provisions for family day care educators and requiring these educators to hold an approved certificate III qualification prior to commencing their role in a family day care service.

As part of the review, sector consultation on the consultation regulation impact statement (CRIS) will occur and the final agreed option/s will be put forward in a decision regulation impact statement (DRS) for education ministers’ endorsement. Timing for the various stages of the review will now extend into 2021 due to delays resulting from COVID-19.

On 28 July 2020 the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

Progress of the 2019 national quality framework review has been delayed due to the impacts of the COVID-19 health pandemic. As a result, the various stages of the review will extend into 2021. Sector consultation on the CRIS is proposed to occur as part of the review during February to April 2021 with the final agreed option/s to be put forward in a DRIS for education ministers’ endorsement in late 2021.

Recommendation 3

The Ministerial Council and the Australian Children’s Education Quality Authority consider changes to the national law and the national regulations to require information about safe sleeping practices/SIDS and complaints mechanisms be given to parents of children who attend family day care.

Response and action: the recommendation is agreed to in part and implementation is complete.

Responsible agency: Department of Education.

On 2 October 2019 the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

Education Council (a ministerial council on school education, early childhood and higher education) is undertaking a review of the national law and regulations governing early childhood education and care services. The review will include consideration of the provision of information about safe sleeping practices/SIDS and complaints mechanisms to parents of children who attend family day care.

As part of the review, the Education Council will release a consultation regulatory impact statement. Subject to Education Council approval, the statement will outline options for requiring information about safe sleeping practices/SIDS and complaints mechanisms be given to parents of children who attend family day care and seek views on their impact on the early childhood education and care sector. Education Council will consider the feedback from the sector, families and communities and determine whether to implement regulatory or legislative changes.
On 31 March 2020 the Minister for Education and Minister for Industrial Relations responded:

The national law and regulations governing early childhood services require family day care services to have policies and procedures available for families on sleep and rest, and on complaints. Families must be told of any changes to these policies and procedures. Services must also clearly display the name and telephone number of the person to whom complaints may be made. The Guide to the National Quality Framework (as amended in October 2018) provides that authorised officers may sight evidence that information about the service’s approach to safe sleep is documented and shared with families in the course of their assessment and rating, and compliance monitoring.

Education Council is undertaking a review of the National Quality Framework governing early childhood education and care services, including family day care services. The review is currently in the consultation regulation impact statement stage, with a number of options currently proposed on sleep and rest requirements, for example, legislative change to require compulsory sleep training for all educators who care for sleeping children (birth to five years).

As part of the review, sector consultation on the consultation regulation impact statement (CRIS) will occur and the final agreed option/s will be put forward in a decision regulation impact statement (DRS) for education ministers’ endorsement. Timing for the various stages of the review will now extend into 2021 due to delays resulting from COVID-19.
